

Direction Control Valves

The Directional Control valve 4D02 consists of a body, spool and either one or two actuators depending upon the application. The spool is shifted by the action of electrical solenoid, mechanical, hydraulic, pneumatic, cam or lever actuator mechanism. Spool movement allows oil under pressure from port P to flow to either port A or B, and subsequently connect the other port to tank.