

Safety Valve

A safety valve is not a process valve or pressure regulator and should not be misused as such. It should have to operate for one purpose only: overpressure protection. A safety valve is a safety device and, in many cases, the last line of defence. It is important to ensure that the safety valve is capable to operate at all times and under all circumstances.